Extracts from a late Pamphlet printed in London, being an Enquiry into the late mercantile Distresses in Scotland and England, with a few Thoughts on the Causes of the Difficulties that now prevail among the greatest Part of the Inhabitants of the whole Island; in a Letter to the Earl of ———.

OF all the measures of government that intrench upon the rights of the subject, those laws that are made to fasten upon property are the worst. They are not indeed levelled at the lives and liberties of the people, but nothing ties up their hands more effectually; and whilst the great wheel of an expensive government turns round, it winds up the property of the subjects at large; and was a peck of wheat sold for a penny, the poor man must want bread, if the amount of the public taxes is disproportioned to the wealth of the people who are compelled to pay them. The subjects may enjoy liberty of conscience, their persons be free, and their houses sacred; but when the burthens of the state reduces their trade, and exhausts their property, the extremity of every evil is brought upon them in the single cause of their poverty.

Upon this point rests the justice of the legislature; in their hands are held the scales betwixt their subjects and their servants. And shall they extort with one hand millions from the great family of the industrious, the poor and the needy; and with the other squander thousands upon services that can only be truly said to be performed in vain? For hundreds of unworthy greatness, live in state at the people's cost, who cannot say that they perform to the public any EARTHLY service. And justice must be deaf, as well as blind, to enable those who do, to ride in pomp upon the ruins of the People.

The Cause which I serve scorns the name of all party or personality. It is the oppression of an expensive government of which we complain. It is the general relief of the people from the unjust part of the burthens of the state for which we contend. In this cause the common man becomes an hero; and when thousands are ready to perish with hunger, the very idea of being but remotely conducive to their relief, raises every honest man above himself; and those that join to assist the diffusion of benevolence to a whole people, are in the path that assimilates man to his divine creator. An association with these objects for its end all will join, but those who live upon public money, or trade in popular favour, or the tyrant, or the slave, or those, the worst of all, whose unfeeling hearts can sit at ease, or turn aside, and unpitied and unrelieved let old age and infancy weep together, for want of bread.

Men the counterpart of those I have named, must ere long, join in taking the people's part, and 'till they can regain the lost weight in the legislative scale, may prevent the public attention from being misled by ideal objects, set up to delude them into a vain expectation of relief, whilst they continue to labour under burthens that are so lucrative to their oppressors. First, the nation was amused with its colonies being made to bear a part of its heavy load. Then unaccounted millions were to be bro't to its aid. And after these had slipped through the public sieve, then the nation's grievances were to be removed by a triennial election of the mercenary representatives of hireling constituents. And the time that has been spent in attending to the unpropitious object of popular clamour, is an insult to our country's common sense. And now the people are tired of wrangling for a straw, and the multitude are awakened out of their dream by hunger and could, lest they should dwell upon the cause that keeps draining from the people the means of their support, a great object is started, just in time to catch our love of novelty, and to feed us with the hopes of our national distress being transformed into plenty by the treasures to be yielded to us from a country whose inhabitants have but lately died by thousands for mere want of food.

But could the riches of the East be transported to this country, and diffused through all the inhabitants of the land, it might indeed afford resources to a committee of ways and means for a season, but it would soon be exhausted by the demands of a state whose dependents can know no limits, whilst those that possess the power of taxation, continue to reap advantages from the burthens they impose upon the subjects.

And were the mines of peru dedicated to the relief of the people of the land, the means of charity would fail, and be unequal to the distress of our poor, so long as the expence of government to its subjects remains as it is.

The internal welfare of this country acknowledges the force of no foreign aid. The enemies of Great-Britain laugh at all attempts to support her power and commerce, except by the frugality of her government, and the industry of her subjects. The arbitrary rivals of our state raise their exultations with the increasing expence and consequent luxury of the former, because they know it must be followed by decay and weakness among the people, whose strength the experience of ages has convinced them, is not to be resisted so long as they remain free from the oppression of their own governors, and independent by a successful industry, in the various links of the great chain of commerce that surrounds our island. When this begins to break and internal poverty prevails, they behold with joy the British subjects sinking down to an equality with their own; and their victory would be complete, could their favourite doctrine once mislead our government into the pleasing delusion of all who possess authority, That kings reign for themselves alone. This is the first spring of that monstrous distinction between the interests of the subjects and those of the prince; and however sincerely he wishes the happiness of his people, when those under his authority are yearly receiving their thousands from the people, an interest is set up contrary to the welfare of the subjects, and ambition, with a train of inordinate desires, stalks at the head of it, and all complaints against them are turned into discord; and the truths that ring throughout the realm expire and die away at the gates of the palace. The prince's cares, as well as his intelligence, are then contracted within very scanty limits; and he is too often alarmed by artful and designed men, and taught to consider his people as an enemy to be dreaded; and when that dread is impressed, it gives reality to the ideal danger. All confidence is then soon destroyed; and the necessity of living guarded against a seditious populace is inculcated; and standing armies are kept in pay, to be a burthen and a terror to those who most deserve their sovereign's love and peculiar care. And as the expence of the state impoverishes the subjects, it appears to jealous greatness, as the means of securing the subjection of the people. An oppressive taxation on the one hand is accompanied by distress and murmurs on the other; and the dark seeds of civil discord, like a smothered flame, lies concealed in the very heart of the state, till with one loud roar it breaks out through all the land.

Where we leagued with the enemies of our country for its destruction, they could require no other assistance to complete their wishes, than to have the power of Taxation held in the hands of a majority of men, whose avarice and ambition lead them in chains of dependence to submit to the will of ministers of state, who consider not how their splender grows out of the misery of others, & of the tears extorted from thousands of the people to furnish means for the extravagance of courtiers, who are continually crouding their master's presence, to shew their grateful praise for the greatness of his munificence, by which they would make injustice assume the mein of virtue, and conceal from the best of princes what numbers of his honest subjects groan in wretchedness, to support the royal bounty. And when this is found to out-live the ability of the people, poverty and luxury are hastily approaching to their opposite extremes.

When every department of government is become an intolerable charge to the people, the empire then by its own weight is tottering to its fall; and a few years more may prove Mr. Prior's question was prophetic.

May not our pow'r and commerce be suppress,
And arts and empire learn to travel west?

But those that are fatalists in government appear to be the most mistaken of their sect; as this would justify a degeneracy of manners, and reduce despair to system. Old age is unknown to the body-politic; and a situation never occurs wherein it is allowed us to relinquish all hopes of our country's being relieved from her difficulties; and the present sufferings of so great a part of the people, may in one day awaken them all to a sense of the danger to which they have exposed themselves, by permitting the right of ELECTION to be held by so small a part of the community, did the constitution of the commons even now retain its original form. But when they are shewn to what an inconsiderable number that small part is reduced, by the unworthy means which have destroyed their side of legislative triangle, their united voice may regain them their genuine weight; and by a frequent jealous choice of the men on whom they devolve so much authority, may upon a sure foundation raise a lasting monument to the PEOPLE's security, and by inscribing it with all the evils to which they are now exposed, it may stand the great land-mark of all ages to come, and every year re-gild the unalterable admonition written on its capital.

In this land no man is suffered to live, of whom it can be proved, before a jury of his peers, that he received the bribe of a slave for the right of his voice. And he who is elected to the service of the people, and receives the wages of any other master, shall die the death of a traitor to his King, and an enemy to his country.

——— One Murder made a Villain,
Millions a Hero.—Princes were privileg'd
To kill, and Numbers sanctified the Crime.
Ah! why will Kings forget that they are Men?
And Men that they are Brethren? Why delight
In human Sacrifices? Why burst the Ties
Of Nature, that should knit their Souls together
In one soft Bond of Amity and Love?

The following was dispersed in Hand Bills among the worthy Citizens of Philadelphia, who, we are assured will not suffer the East India Company's Tea to be landed there.—It was also Published in the Philadelphia and New-York Papers.

BY UNITING WE STAND—BY DIVIDING WE FALL.

To the Commissioners

Appointed by the EAST INDIA COMPANY, for the SALE of TEA in AMERICA.

GENTLEMEN, vid pa, 386

YOUR appointment, which is notoriously designed to enforce the act of 7th G. III. for raising a revenue in America, justly claims the attention of every man, who wishes well to this country: And you need not be surprised to find the eyes of ALL now fixed on you; as on men, who have it in their power, to ward off the most dangerous stroke, that has been ever meditated against the liberties of America.

You have before you the examples of many of your unhappy countrymen; I mean some of the STAMP MASTERS' examples, which, if properly attended to, may convince you, how foolish, how dangerous it is, to undertake to force the loathsome pills of slavery, and oppression, down the throats of a free, independent, and determined people. Your appointment is exactly similar to that of our late STAMP MASTERS. They were commissioned to enforce one revenue act; you, to execute another. The Stamp and Tea Laws were both designed to raise a revenue, and to establish parliamentary despotism, in America.

There cannot therefore be any difference in your appointments, except in this; that their office as Stamp Men, favoured strongly of the nature of excise officers; whilst you in the execution of your duty, may retain some faint resemblance of the decent characters of Factors. But let not names deceive you: Your characters, as Stamp Masters and Tea Commissioners, have a strong and near affinity. They, and you could boast that you were our brethren; they, and you owe at least SUPPORT, if not LIFE to America; and what characterizes the two employments in the strongest manner, they and you were marked out by the conspirators against our rights, to give the last, the finishing stroke to freedom in this country.—Strange indeed! that Americans should be pitched on to violate the privileges of Americans!

You cannot believe that the Tea Act, with respect to its design and tendency, differs in one single point from the Stamp Act. If there be any difference, the Tea Act is the more dangerous. The Stamp Act was sensibly felt by all ranks of people; and was therefore opposed by all; but the Tea Act, more insidious in its operation, required some pains to discover its malignity.—Under the First, no man could transfer his property; he could not even read a news paper, without seeing and feeling the detestable imposition; it was therefore, too glaring to pass unnoticed and unopposed.—But, under the Tea Law, the duty being paid on importation, is afterwards laid on the article, and becomes so blended with the price of it, that, although every man who purchases tea imported from Britain, must of course pay the duty; yet, every man does not know it, and may, therefore, not object to it. It is in vain then to seek for any distinction between the two employments. To Americans, it must be a matter of indifference, by what stile or title you may think proper to demean yourselves; whether STAMP MASTERS, or TEA COMMISSIONERS. If you are appointed to enforce the revenue act in America, any titles you may assume to yourselves, in the execution of your office, will prove DETESTABLE and INFAMOUS.

If parliament can of right tax us 10l. for any purpose; they may of right tax us 10,000, and so on, without end. And if we allow them a fair opportunity of pleading precedent by a successful execution of the tea act, under your auspices, we may bid adieu to all that is dear and valuable amongst men. Ireland has long groaned under the weight of parliamentary restrictions and impositions. She was once a rich and flourishing Isle; but being charged beyond her abilities, with the payment of excessive sums, to worn out panders & whores, she is now sinking beneath the infamous load; and must, ere long, die a martyr to the absolute controul of the parliament of Great-Britain.

To this miserable situation America will in time be reduced, if you are determined and allowed to execute the scandalous office to which you are appointed. You are marked out as political Bombardiers to demolish the fair structure of American liberty: and much, very much depends on your conduct at this time. For be assured, resolute and successful as you may prove in the execution of your office, AMERICANS will not part with the PALLADIUM OF AMERICA without a hard STRUGGLE; a struggle which it is your duty, and the duty of every man, who wishes the prosperity of Great-Britain & America to prevent.

The perquisites of your office cannot prove such facinating objects, as to tempt you to fly in the face of your Country.—What appointments at home or abroad can ever make up to you, the loss of your brethrens affections? What appointments can atone to your children, for the cruel, most horrid predicament to which you may subject them? You have given them a Birth Right in America, which you found a land of liberty & social enjoyment; let them therefore peaceably and happily inherit it. DARE NOT to act so contrary to the sentiments of your watchful countrymen, as to be induced by the paltry bribe of a petty commission, to rivet the shackles of slavery on your American Brethren.

If the East India company can establish warehouses in America for the sale of TEA, on which a duty is imposed for the purpose of raising a revenue in America, they may vend, in like manner, any other articles of their trade. On such other articles, parliament may impose a duty to be paid in America; and the company's commissioners will no doubt take special care to pay such duty; and reimburse their constituents, by fleecing it from the people. Thus the imposition may be increased at pleasure; and America be subjugated without the possibility of redemption.

It has been alledged by some, that your friends in England, to whose special grace and favour you are entitled for the important commission, have given security, in very high sums for the faithful execution of the trust reposed in you; and that, therefore, you cannot, in honour or good conscience, leave your friends in the lurch; by neglecting or refusing to comply literally with the tenor of your commission. So much, gentlemen, has been advanced in favour of your employment; let us now examine the force of it.

It cannot be meant that your friends in England have engaged that you shall execute the TEA ACT in America: this would be a rash engagement indeed: For it was well known in London what confusion your appointment would occasion in America: And no man would be so foolish as to set you up for Quixotes; and give security for your positive execution of any whimsical schemes the Ministry or the East India Company might chalk out for you: All the security given amounts to no more than this, that, if you should undertake and be permitted to enforce the REVENUE ACT in America, you would discharge faithfully all duties appertaining to your commission: the principal of which was, the regular accounting for, and payment of such money as might arise from the sale of the duties article.

It is then evident that you cannot injure your friends in England, by rejecting the hazardous employment to which you are nominated; but on the contrary, by so doing, you will testify your regard for the rights and privileges of your American brethren; and prove to the world that you are not such men as your friends in England presumed you were; men who, for the sake of a paltry emolument, would impiously sheath the dagger of oppression in the bowels of your country.

The claim of Parliament to tax America, has been too well examined, for you to doubt, at this time, to which side right and justice have given the palm.—Do not, therefore, hesitate at the course you ought to pursue.—If you deliberate, you are lost,—lost to virtue, lost to your country. It is in vain to expect that AMERICANS can give a sanction to your office.——FREEMEN,—AMERICAN FREEMEN can never approve it. You are abundantly capable to judge for yourselves: And I sincerely wish that your conduct, on the present alarming occasion, may be such as will promote your future peace and welfare. It is in your power and you are now warn'd of it, to save YOURSELVES much Trouble, and secure your Native Country from the deadly Stroke now aimed in your persons against her.

In Capt. Smith from Liverpool, came Paſſengers, Mr. Lee and Family, Mr. Booth, Mr. Barker, and Mr. Richardſon.

Capt. Smith on his Paſſage ſpoke the Ship ——, Capt. Tyler, belonging to Boſton, from Jamaica for Briſtol, about 30 Leagues W. of Cape Clear. Alſo, the Brig Aurora, Capt. Biſhop, from Sheepſcutt, for Liverpool,

We hear that on Friday Night the 3d of September, they had a very hard Gale of Wind at St. Kitts and St. Euſtatia, by which moſt of the Veſſells laying there were obliged to put to Sea; a Schooner belonging to Virginia was drove aſhore, and it was thought would not be got off; and Capt. Hopkins in the Brig Speedwell was obliged to put away for St. Croix, with the Loſs of his Anchors and Cables.

Wedneſday the Militia Companies at Dorcheſter under Capt. Clap and Capt. Pierce, had their Training and performed their Exerciſes to the great Satisfaction of the Spectators.

Alſo, the Company of Artillery ſelected out of Col. Hatch's Regiment, and belonging thereto, made their firſt public appearance, under Capt. Lemuel Robinſon: The Company were dreſſed in Uniform, and were reviewed by the Colonel: A great Number of Spectators, among whom were the principal Officers of the Militia in this Town, were preſent, who were extraordinarily well pleaſed to ſee this new Company perform their Military Exerciſes, Firings, and many Moſœuvres with ſuch Exactneſs and Regularity.

A Letter from Newbury-Port, of the 10th inſt. ſays, "We have lately had our Court Week, when the novel Caſe of Cæſar againſt his Maſter, in an Action of 50 l. Lawful Money Damages, for detaining him in Slavery, was litigated before a Jury of the County, who found for the Plaintiff 18 l. Damages and Coſt; from which Judgment the Defendant appealed."

We hear from Winthrop, on Kennebec River, that a Rape was lately committed there, by a married Man, on the Body of a Girl of 13 Years of Age.—We further hear that the Affair was compromiſed by the Offenders paying, to the Father of the Girl, the immenſe Sum of Two Hundred Pounds Old Wheat.

Laſt Tueſday died here, Miſs Mary Rogers, eldeſt Daughter of Mr. Gamaliel Rogers.—Her Remains were decently inter'd laſt Friday Afternoon.

DIED.] Mrs. Sarah Elliſon, Wife of Mr. Elliſon, Bookbinder.—Mrs. Luckis, aged 31.—Mrs. Eſther Hallowell, Wife of Mr. William Hallowell, Blackſmith.

Extract of a Letter from Philadelphia, Oct. 26, 1773.

"Send no Tea, it cannot be receiv'd here, our Merchants have a Meeting this Afternoon, in which the whole City it will doubtleſs be agreed not to receive any of the Teas which are ſaid to be ſhipp'd from Great-Britain to this Place, nor can any be receiv'd here from any other Colony without much Scrutiny. 'Tis beſt not to be concern'd even in that Tea which never did pay Duty."

Laſt Week Capt. Rogers arrived at Rhode-Iſland from London: He ſailed from thence the 17th of Auguſt, in Company with Capt. Shand, for the ſame Place, who was not arrived.——We learn by a Gentleman who came Paſſenger, that Capt. Scott in the Brig Dolphin, was to ſail for this Port in a few Days, and that Capt. Scott, in the Ship Haley would not be long after them:——We alſo learn, That the late Intention of the Eaſt India Company of ſending Bohea Tea to the Colonies, had created ſo much Uneaſineſs and Oppoſition among the Merchants and others, trading to America, that it was uncertain whether any would be ſhipp'd hither on their Account or not.

Saturday laſt died Mrs. Patience Cazneau, Wife of Mr. William Cazneau, Merchant, and youngeſt Daughter of the late Capt. John Hamock, deceaſed.—Her Funeral will be attended To-morrow Afternoon, at half after 4 o'Clock; at which Time the Friends and Relations are deſired to attend.
